100 funny questions to ask your grandparents: 144 Creative Discussions for Parents & Preteens - Questions to Strengthen the Relationships Between Mom, Dad, Son & Daughter Bill & Mia Belew, 2020-01-01 Every parent wants to and should have deeper and more meaningful discussions with their preteens, middle graders and teenagers. How can this happen? This booklet - 144 Discussions That Every Parent Should Have with Their Middle Graders and Teenagers is meant to facilitate unforced conversations between parents and their children - preteen and teenagers. This booklet works best when accompanied with the Middle Grade adventure novel - The Giant Forest. But it can also work as a stand alone volume of own. However, when a parent read together - not necessarily sitting next to one another - but on the same schedule, the story of The Giant Forest becomes a common interest between the parent, grandparent and child/ren. While talking about the book, the plot, the twists and turns, the discussion questions fit very naturally into the conversation - perhaps at meal time or while driving too and from school or some extra curricular event. What parent doesn't want to know if their child/ren are feeling unloved, teased by their friends or have themselves become a bully? This book is a list of questions parents would love to ask and get answers from with their child/ren. Reader beware - your children will want to know your answers, too. What better way to get your children to talk and listen than to show them by openly sharing and pausing long enough to really listen to them. Enjoy a better relationship with your children after spending time in this book and its companion volume - The Giant Forest - also available wherever you buy books online.

100 funny questions to ask your grandparents: The Flock We Found Mary Reaves Uhles, 2025-09-09 Baby Bird lives with Mama Bird, Papa Bird, and a lot of worry. Mostly Baby Bird worries when Papa Bird comes home. Sometimes he comes home too loud, or too quiet, or too . . . different. When all the birds in the tree decide to host a field day, Baby Bird hatches a plan. If he can win field day, Papa Bird will come home happy . . . right? With the help of Mama and all his neighbors, Baby Bird flies highest, builds a practically perfect nest, and catches the fastest worm! And Papa Bird doesn't even notice. Baby Bird is devastated. Was all his hard work for nothing? Mama and all his neighbors help him to understand that he is surrounded by love. And what's more—he found a flock who will always support him. This is a story of found family and encouragement for any kid with a parent who may not be able to be fully present in their lives. Includes a reader's note by Ellen Braaten, PhD, with more information on the effect on children living in unpredictable homes and ways to help them cope.

100 funny questions to ask your grandparents: Diversity and Society Joseph F. Healey, Andi Stepnick, 2022-11-22 Of the challenges confronting the United States today, those relating to diversity continue to be among the most urgent and the most daunting. Americans value equality, freedom, and justice. However, discrimination, rejection of others, racism, and sexism are also part of our national heritage. Every part of our society, and virtually every item on the national agenda-welfare and health care, policing, crime and punishment, family, education, defense, foreign policy, and terrorism-have some connection with dominant-minority relations. This textbook contributes to our ongoing national discussion by presenting information, raising questions, and deeply examining relevant issues. Our goal is to help you increase your knowledge, improve your understanding of the issues, and clarify your thinking about social inequalities related to race, ethnicity, gender, class, and other inequalities. We've written for undergraduate students-sociology majors and non-majors alike. We make few assumptions about students' knowledge of history or sociological concepts, and we try to present the material in a way that you'll find relevant and easy to understand. For example, we use a unified set of themes and concepts throughout the book. Our analysis is consistent and continuous, even as we examine multiple sociological perspectives and different points of view. We introduce most of the conceptual framework in the first four chapters. Then, in Chapters 5 through 8, we apply these concepts and analytical themes to a series of minority groups (e.g., African Americans, Native Americans). Chapter 9 examines immigrant groups that are relatively new to the United States. Finally, in Chapter 10, we review and summarize our main points, conclude our analysis, and speculate about the future. Thus, this text follows an explicit structure: introduction (Part 1), application and development (Parts 2 and 3), and conclusion (Part 4). We hope that this organization will help you follow the thrust of our analysis and recognize the complexity of group relations, inequality, and conflict. Our analysis is, generally, macro and comparative. That is, we focus on large groups and social structures-such as social institutions and stratification systems. We systematically compare the experiences and situations of America's many minority groups over time. The book follows in the tradition of conflict theory, but it isn't a comprehensive statement of that tradition. We introduce and apply other perspectives, but we don't attempt to give equal attention to all current sociological paradigms, explain everything, or include all possible analytical points of view. It couldn't be done! Rather, our goals are (a) to present the sociology of minority group relations in a way that's understandable and intellectually challenging and (b) to address the issues (and tell the stories behind the issues) in a way that is interesting and that shows the power and importance of sociological thinking--

100 funny questions to ask your grandparents: If It Takes a Village, Build One Malaak Compton-Rock, 2010-04-06 A must have book for anyone has ever wanted to make a difference in the world. _____ Service is the rent we pay for living says preeminent children's advocate Marian Wright Edelman and this is the motto by which Malaak Compton Rock, dedicated humanitarian and wife of comedian Chris Rock, lives her life. From a childhood grounded in the importance of giving back to her work in public relations at The U.S. Fund for UNICEF to becoming a full-time mother and humanitarian, Malaak's life has fully embodied this sentiment. Part memoir, part practical guide, If It Takes a Village, Build One offers readers insightful advice on everything from how to find just the right volunteer opportunity, how to get kids involved in a life of service, how to research charities, and even how to start a nonprofit, as Malaak did several years ago. All of this practical wisdom is grounded in inspirational anecdotes about her own experience with service, including her work with Katrina rebuilding and her recent brainchild, Journey for Change: Empowering Youth Through Global Service, a program for at-risk kids from Bushwick, Brooklyn, which takes teens on a two week service mission to South Africa to volunteer and experience the world. The book also features interviews with other well known humanitarians, like PR powerhouse Terrie M. Williams, activist Bobby Shriver, and journalist Soledad O'Brien and engaging sidebars with interesting facts about service and nuggets of advice. At the end of the narrative readers will find a compendium of information including Malaak's favorite charities, unique service ideas, and suggested reading and web resources, which will make this a book to be visited time and time again. Far from being preachy or sanctimonious, Malaak's warm voice reminds us all that giving back is ultimately easier and infinitely more fulfilling than we thought it could be. Warm, honest, and accessible, If it Takes a Village, Build One will be the must-have book (and perfect gift!) for aspiring do-gooders.
