Understanding Behavioural Nursing Interview Questions

Behavioural nursing interview questions are designed to assess how candidates have behaved in specific professional situations, reflecting their skills, attitudes, and decision-making processes. Unlike traditional questions that may focus on qualifications or hypothetical scenarios, behavioural questions require candidates to provide concrete examples from their past experiences.

Purpose of Behavioural Questions in Nursing Interviews

The main purpose of behavioural nursing interview questions is to predict future job performance based on historical behavior. Employers seek to understand how nurses manage stress, communicate with patients and colleagues, handle ethical dilemmas, and prioritize tasks in demanding environments. These questions help interviewers gauge the candidate's emotional intelligence, teamwork capabilities, and clinical competence.

Key Competencies Assessed

Behavioural questions typically assess a range of competencies critical to nursing roles, including:

- Communication skills

- Problem-solving and critical thinking
- Team collaboration and leadership
- Adaptability and flexibility
- Patient care and empathy
- Time management and prioritization

Common Behavioural Nursing Interview Questions

Familiarity with common behavioural nursing interview questions can help candidates prepare structured and relevant responses. Below are frequently asked questions categorized by competency.

Communication and Teamwork Questions

Effective communication and collaboration are vital in nursing. Examples of behavioural questions in this area include:

- Describe a time when you had to communicate complex information to a patient or family member.
- Give an example of how you handled a conflict with a coworker.
- Tell me about a situation where you worked as part of a multidisciplinary team.

Problem-Solving and Critical Thinking Questions

These questions assess a nurse's ability to think critically and resolve challenges in clinical settings. Sample questions include:

- Can you describe a time when you identified a patient safety issue and what you did about it?
- Tell me about a situation where you had to make a quick decision under pressure.
- Give an example of how you handled an unexpected change in a patient's condition.

Empathy and Patient Care Questions

Empathy and compassionate care are cornerstones of nursing. Interviewers often ask:

- Describe a time when you went above and beyond to support a patient emotionally.
- Tell me about a situation where you had to care for a difficult or uncooperative patient.
- Give an example of how you handled delivering bad news to a patient or family member.

Techniques for Answering Behavioural Questions

Responding effectively to behavioural nursing interview questions requires a structured approach that clearly illustrates past experiences and competencies. The STAR method is widely recommended for this purpose.

The STAR Method

STAR stands for Situation, Task, Action, and Result. This technique helps candidates organize their answers logically:

1. Situation: Describe the context within which you performed a task or faced a challenge.
2. Task: Explain the specific responsibility or objective involved.
3. Action: Detail the steps you took to address the task or problem.
4. Result: Share the outcome of your actions, quantifying success if possible.

Tips for Crafting Strong Responses

To maximize the impact of answers to behavioural nursing interview questions, candidates should consider the following tips:

- Be specific and use concrete examples from past nursing experiences.
- Highlight skills relevant to the position you are applying for.
- Focus on positive outcomes and what you learned from the experience.
- Maintain professionalism and avoid blaming others in your responses.
- Practice answers aloud to improve clarity and confidence.

Preparing for a Behavioural Nursing Interview

Thorough preparation is crucial to perform well in behavioural nursing interviews. Understanding the format and anticipating potential questions can reduce anxiety and improve delivery.

Research the Employer and Role

Knowing the healthcare facility's values, patient population, and specific job requirements enables candidates to tailor their responses to align with organizational priorities and expectations.

Review Your Nursing Experiences

Reflect on clinical rotations, internships, volunteer work, and previous nursing roles to identify relevant examples that demonstrate key competencies. Prepare multiple STAR stories to cover different topics.

Practice Mock Interviews

Engaging in mock interviews with peers or mentors allows candidates to refine their answers and receive constructive feedback. This practice builds confidence and helps manage interview day nerves.

Prepare Questions for the Interviewer

Asking insightful questions about the team, work environment, and professional development opportunities shows genuine interest and engagement, which can positively influence the interviewer's impression.

Frequently Asked Questions

What are behavioural nursing interview questions?

Behavioural nursing interview questions are questions that focus on how a nurse has handled various situations in the past, aiming to assess their skills, attitudes, and behaviours relevant to nursing practice.

behavioural nursing interview questions: Psychiatric & Mental Health Nursing - E-Book Ruth Elder, Debra Nizette, Katie Evans, 2011-06-02 The new edition of Psychiatric and Mental Health Nursing focuses on practice in mental health and psychiatric care integrating theory and the realities of practice. Mental wellness is featured as a concept, and the consideration of a range of psychosocial factors helps students contextualise mental illness and psychiatric disorders. The holistic approach helps the student and the beginning practitioner understand the complex causation of mental illness, its diagnosis, effective interventions and treatments, and the client's experience of mental illness.

behavioural nursing interview questions: Behaviour Therapy Nursing Philip J. Barker, 2025-09-17 The behavioural approach in nursing practice is the main concern of this book, originally published in 1982. Although the discussion concentrates on the fields of psychiatry and learning disabilities, it is also relevant to other areas of nursing such as the care of the elderly or of sick children. The book traces the development of behaviour therapy from its beginnings in the experimental laboratory work of Pavlov, Skinner and Watson to the more recent influences of social learning theory. A survey is made of the major stages in the therapy process, and this is followed by a detailed description of possible types of treatment. In conclusion some of the more controversial issues raised in this book are reconsidered, along with their implications.

behavioural nursing interview questions: Nursing for Wellness in Older Adults Carol A. Miller, 2009 Now in its Fifth Edition, this text provides a comprehensive and wellness-oriented approach to the theory and practice of gerontologic nursing. The author provides research-based background information and a variety of practical assessment and intervention strategies for use in every clinical setting. Highlights of this edition include expanded coverage of evidence-based practice, more first-person stories, new chapters, and clinical tools such as assessment tools recommended by the Hartford Institute of Geriatric Nursing.

behavioural nursing interview questions: A Question of Choice Pamela McGrath, 2018-10-26 First published in 1997, this book contributes to our understanding of the way our society responds to issues of death and dying. The trans-disciplinary research which informs this discussion is situated in the disciplines of bioethics and palliative care. Postmodern notions of discourse and power are used to explore the organizational approach of one hospice (Karuna Hospice Service) to working with the dying. In modern, Western technological societies, biomedicine is the dominant discourse which underpins our care of the terminally ill. Bioethics has recently emerged as a discipline concerned with resolving the many ethical dilemmas arising from such a physiological, technologized approach to death. Rather than add to such studies, this research looks into the direction of alternative ways of responding to the dying in our community. KHS was chosen for this research as it presented the possibility of a holistic and spiritual alternative to the positivist, reductionist hegemony of scientific medicine. The research focus is on establishing and describing this difference, and exploring how such an organization could maintain resistance to mainstream medicine. The research findings are shared with the intent of using the material and insights gained to explore important issues presently arising in bioethics and palliative care, for example the recent critique of Principlism in bioethics and the methodological difficulties restricting research into spirituality for palliative care.

behavioural nursing interview questions: Textbook of Nursing Education - E-Book Latha Venkatesan, Poonam Joshi, 2015-10-31 It was a long-time desire of nursing fraternity to have a textbook on nursing education that has the content for all the units of the INC-prescribed syllabus. behavioural nursing interview questions: Research Methods for Nursing and Healthcare John Maltby, Glenn Williams, Julie McGarry, Liz Day, 2014-02-04 Research Methods for Nursing and Healthcare is an essential introductory text for all nursing and healthcare students coming to research methods for the first time or those nurses and healthcare staff wishing to improve their skills in this area. The book includes comprehensive coverage of the main research methods topics, and provides guidance on how to understand and apply research techniques. Everyday nursing examples are used throughout to explain research methods concepts and their relevance to practice. Simple self-assessment tasks are included at the end of chapters; the tests can be undertaken individually, or within groups, to assess the students understanding of the concepts and skills being learnt. Research Methods for Nursing and Healthcare takes the fear out of research methods for all nursing and healthcare professionals. Excellent introductory text that brings interest to research methods for student nurses. Dr Aimee Aubeeluck, Deputy Director: Graduate Entry Nursing, School of Nursing, Midwifery and Physiotherapy University of Nottingham I think this is one of the most readable books on research I have read. Not the most scholarly, but that was not the intention. It is certainly the most user friendly book that will make the whole, often scary, subject of research less threatening. Paula Crick, Principal Lecturer, Faculty of Health, Staffordshire University I do think this is one of the most engaging texts aimed at nursing that I have read in a while... This does seem much more exciting and more importantly. real world Lucy Land, Senior Academic, Centre for Health and Social Care Research Faculty of Health Birmingham City University Useful resource for our students dissertation which can be a literature review or a research proposal Melanie Brooke-Read, Department of Health & Social Studies, University of Bedfordshire Excellent text book which actually takes away the 'fear' of research within healthcare Angela Cobbold, Institute of Health & Social Care, Anglia Ruskin University The text is very comprehensive and I found chapter 7 on action research particularly useful in supporting a student I was supervising. I also like the self assessment exercises which I intend to incorporate in my teaching strategy. Ms. Mulcahy, School of Nursing and Midwifery, University College Cork.

behavioural nursing interview questions: Training Behaviour Therapists (Psychology Revivals) Derek Milne, 2015-03-27 Originally published in 1986, one of the major developments in behavioural psychotherapy and mental health in the previous decade had been the growing involvement of non-psychologists in behaviour therapy. This was a result of the fact that there were too few psychologists to cope with problem behaviour and that other professionals or carers began to appreciate more clearly their potential as agents of behaviour change. Foremost among these 'mediators' of therapy were parents, nurses (particularly psychiatric nurses) and teachers (especially remedial teachers). Their involvement had greatly increased the efficiency of behaviour therapy at the time and opened up a new era in applied psychology. It also entailed the development of new training formats, evaluation procedures and implementation strategies. The main aim of this book was to provide a summary of the research relevant to these issues, and to offer practical guidelines to those who were interested in training or being trained as behaviour therapists. For this reason there are chapters by researchers who have been involved in training parents, nurses and teachers. These chapters provide a detailed account of training in a form that was rarely available in published form at the time, and even today should be of great assistance to readers.
