Overview of the Creighton Occupational Therapy Program

The Creighton occupational therapy schedule is designed to provide a comprehensive education that integrates theoretical knowledge with practical application. The program typically spans over several semesters, combining classroom instruction with clinical experiences that ensure students meet the competencies required by the American Occupational Therapy Association (AOTA) and other accrediting bodies. The curriculum emphasizes evidence-based practice, critical thinking, and patient-centered care. Students are expected to engage in various learning modalities, including lectures, laboratory work, group projects, and hands-on clinical placements. This multifaceted approach prepares graduates for diverse occupational therapy roles in healthcare, education, and community settings.

Academic Schedule and Coursework Structure

The academic portion of the Creighton occupational therapy schedule generally follows a semester system, with each semester focusing on specific foundational and advanced topics. The coursework is sequenced to build progressively on students' knowledge and skills. Core subjects include anatomy and physiology, neuroscience, therapeutic techniques, psychosocial aspects of therapy, and assistive technology. The schedule typically balances lecture hours with practical lab sessions to reinforce learning.

Typical Semester Breakdown

Each semester in the Creighton occupational therapy schedule includes a combination of required courses and electives tailored to the student's area of interest. A typical semester may include:

- Foundations of Occupational Therapy
- Human Movement and Kinesiology
- Occupational Therapy Assessment and Intervention
- Clinical Reasoning and Evidence-Based Practice
- Research Methods and Professional Development

This structured approach ensures a balance between theoretical knowledge and applied skills, with increasing complexity in course content as students advance through the program.

Clinical Fieldwork and Practical Experience

Integral to the Creighton occupational therapy schedule is the clinical fieldwork component, which provides students with real-world experience in various healthcare and community settings. These clinical placements are scheduled strategically throughout the program to complement academic learning and allow students to apply their skills under supervision.

Fieldwork Levels and Timing

The occupational therapy program at Creighton typically incorporates multiple levels of fieldwork:

- Level I Fieldwork: Introductory experiences embedded within the early semesters, focusing on observation and basic participation in occupational therapy practices.
- Level II Fieldwork: More intensive and immersive clinical placements occurring in the later semesters, requiring students to demonstrate competence in assessment, treatment planning, and intervention.

Scheduling these experiences requires coordination with clinical sites to ensure availability and alignment with the academic calendar. Students must complete a minimum number of fieldwork hours to meet licensure requirements.

Clinical Site Diversity

Creighton's occupational therapy schedule includes placements in a variety of settings, such as:

- Hospitals and rehabilitation centers
- Schools and pediatric clinics
- Community mental health organizations
- Geriatric and long-term care facilities

This diversity enriches the student experience and prepares graduates for versatile career paths.

Strategies for Effective Time Management

Managing the demanding Creighton occupational therapy schedule requires effective time management skills. Balancing rigorous academic coursework with clinical responsibilities can be challenging without proper planning and organization.

Prioritizing Tasks and Commitments

Students should prioritize their tasks by identifying deadlines, clinical hours, and study requirements. Utilizing planners or digital calendars can help track key dates and reduce stress. Breaking down complex projects into manageable steps facilitates steady progress.

Balancing Study and Self-Care

Incorporating regular breaks and self-care routines into the schedule supports mental and physical well-being, which is essential for sustained academic performance and clinical excellence. Establishing boundaries between study time and personal time enhances overall productivity.

Additional Opportunities and Scheduling

Flexibility

The Creighton occupational therapy schedule also allows for additional educational opportunities such as workshops, seminars, and interprofessional collaborations. These activities complement the core curriculum and provide valuable networking and learning experiences.

Electives and Specializations

Students may have options to choose electives or focus areas within the occupational therapy program to tailor their education to specific interests, such as pediatrics, hand therapy, or mental health. Flexibility in scheduling these electives enables students to explore diverse fields while maintaining progress toward degree completion.

Summer Sessions and Accelerated Options

Creighton may offer summer courses or accelerated scheduling options that allow students to complete the program more quickly or to free up time during traditional semesters for fieldwork or research projects. These alternatives provide students with additional ways to customize their educational timeline according to personal and professional goals.

creighton occupational therapy schedule: Crossing Boundaries Patrick M. Green, Mathew Johnson, 2023-07-03 Are there better ways to address community challenges than expending funds on international service-learning? In attempting to wed learning and service, are we exploiting the "other" for new, or recycled, aims? As these questions attest, of all types of service-learning, international service-learning (ISL) most starkly illuminates the tensions between the liberatory and oppressive potentials of practice. This book explores the ramifications of realizing a new age of service-learning that pushes beyond single episodic course-based projects to rebalance student learning and community outcome priorities, and provides insight into what it looks like in its execution. In describing eleven international programs designed to achieve reciprocal, sustained relationships in which learning is co-created, the contributors reveal their struggles to change the balance of power relationships and move to a more transformative practice. Common themes are the developmental nature of this work; the recognition that it takes multiple attempts, often over years, for an individual or an institution to get this work even nearly right; that resolving the challenges of unequal resources, power, and privilege can never be completely erased; and that attention has to be given to the micro-level details. What emerge are seven guiding principles that define the nature of partnerships in liberatory practice, and that apply to all forms of service learning. They must be: strategic--linked to the mission and expertise of the institution; long-term; multifaceted--allowing both partners to play a multiplicity of roles; developmental in building capacities; contextualized in historic and cultural understanding; fully reciprocal; and create the potential for community-driven change. In addressing the problematic nature of ISL, and of service-learning in general, this book interrogates whether its experiences create the necessary conditions for the formation of individual values, convictions, and action; and whether their pivotal teaching and learning moments are indeed replicable and transferable across individual, institutional and even cultural contexts. Its conclusions and insights will be of intense interest to administrators and practitioners alike.
