Overview of CSULB Marriage and Family Therapy Program

The csulb marriage and family therapy program is housed within the College of Health and Human Services, emphasizing a holistic approach to mental health treatment for individuals, couples, and families. The program is accredited by the Commission on Accreditation for Marriage and Family Therapy Education (COAMFTE), ensuring adherence to national standards of education and training. This accreditation signifies that the curriculum meets rigorous criteria essential for preparing competent, ethical, and culturally sensitive therapists. CSULB's program integrates systemic theory, psychotherapeutic techniques, and research-based practices, fostering a deep understanding of relational dynamics and therapeutic interventions.

Program Mission and Goals

The mission of the csulb marriage and family therapy program is to train culturally competent therapists who are equipped to address diverse client needs within a changing societal context. The program's goals include developing clinical expertise, promoting ethical practice, advancing knowledge through research, and preparing students for successful licensure as Licensed Marriage and Family Therapists (LMFTs). These objectives align with the university's broader commitment to community service and academic excellence.

Degree Options

CSULB offers a Master of Science (M.S.) degree in Marriage and Family Therapy, which is designed for students aiming to pursue clinical licensure. The program's structure supports both full-time and part-time enrollment options, accommodating diverse student needs. Graduates receive comprehensive training that prepares them for clinical practice, research, supervision, and leadership roles within mental health settings.

Admission Requirements and Application Process

Admission to the csulb marriage and family therapy program is competitive, reflecting its rigorous academic standards and clinical focus. Prospective students must meet specific academic credentials and demonstrate a commitment to the field of marriage and family therapy. The application process involves multiple components designed to assess the applicant's preparedness and suitability for graduate-level study and clinical work.

Academic Prerequisites

Applicants are required to hold a bachelor's degree from a regionally accredited institution, typically with coursework in psychology, sociology, human development, or related fields. A minimum GPA, often around 3.0, is generally expected to ensure academic readiness. Additionally, prerequisite courses in statistics, abnormal psychology, and human development may be necessary to build foundational knowledge for graduate study.

Application Components

The application package usually includes the following elements:

- Official transcripts from all previously attended institutions
- Letters of recommendation from academic or professional references

- A personal statement outlining career goals and motivations for pursuing marriage and family therapy
- Résumé or curriculum vitae highlighting relevant experience
- GRE scores (if required by the program)
- Completion of an interview or writing sample, depending on program requirements

Curriculum and Course Structure

The csulb marriage and family therapy curriculum is designed to provide a balanced integration of theory, research, and clinical practice. Students engage with core coursework, elective seminars, and practicum experiences that collectively build their competence as therapists. The curriculum emphasizes systemic approaches, developmental theories, and culturally responsive interventions.

Core Courses

Core courses cover foundational topics essential for marriage and family therapy practice. These include:

- Introduction to Marriage and Family Therapy
- Human Development and Family Dynamics
- Theories of Psychotherapy
- Ethics and Professional Issues in Therapy
- Research Methods and Program Evaluation
- Couples and Family Assessment and Intervention

Practicum and Internship

Hands-on clinical training is a critical component of the csulb marriage and family therapy program. Students participate in supervised practicum and internship placements, where they apply therapeutic techniques under the guidance of licensed professionals. These fieldwork experiences facilitate the development of clinical skills, case conceptualization, and professional identity.

Faculty and Research Opportunities

The csulb marriage and family therapy program boasts a team of experienced faculty members who are active clinicians, researchers, and educators. Faculty expertise spans diverse therapeutic models, cultural competence, trauma-informed care, and mental health policy. Students benefit from mentorship and collaboration that enrich their academic and professional growth.

Research Focus Areas

Research opportunities within the program encourage students to engage in scholarly inquiry related to family systems, couple therapy outcomes, multicultural counseling, and evidence-based interventions. Faculty-led projects often address pressing social issues such as domestic violence, substance abuse, and mental health disparities. Participation in research enhances students' critical thinking and contributes to the advancement of the field.

Clinical Training and Fieldwork Experience

Clinical training is integral to the csulb marriage and family therapy program, providing students with real-world experience in diverse therapeutic settings. The program maintains partnerships with community agencies, hospitals, and counseling centers to facilitate practicum and internship placements. This exposure allows students to work with a broad client population, gaining expertise in various clinical challenges.

Supervision and Evaluation

Students receive ongoing supervision from licensed marriage and family therapists during their clinical training. Supervision sessions focus on case review, ethical considerations, therapeutic techniques, and professional development. Regular evaluations ensure that students meet competency standards and are prepared for independent practice upon graduation.

Clinical Skills Development

The clinical training emphasizes the development of essential skills, including:

- Effective communication and active listening
- Assessment and diagnosis of relational and individual issues

- Implementation of evidence-based therapeutic interventions
- Cultural sensitivity and ethical decision-making
- Collaboration with multidisciplinary teams

Career Outcomes and Licensure Preparation

Graduates of the csulb marriage and family therapy program are well-prepared to pursue licensure as Licensed Marriage and Family Therapists (LMFTs) in California and other states. The program's comprehensive training ensures that students meet the educational requirements mandated by licensing boards. Additionally, the curriculum prepares graduates for diverse career paths within mental health and social services.

Licensing Process Support

CSULB provides resources and guidance to help students navigate the licensure process, including preparation for the national MFT exam and state-specific requirements. Alumni often report high pass rates and successful entry into professional practice, reflecting the program's effectiveness in preparing competent clinicians.

Career Opportunities

Graduates of csulb marriage and family therapy find employment in a variety of settings, such as:

- Community mental health centers
- Private practice
- Hospitals and healthcare systems
- Schools and educational institutions
- Substance abuse treatment programs
- Nonprofit organizations

Diversity, Inclusion, and Community Engagement

CSULB's marriage and family therapy program emphasizes the importance of diversity, equity, and inclusion in both education and clinical practice. The program fosters cultural competence by integrating multicultural perspectives throughout the curriculum and encouraging students to engage with diverse populations. Community engagement initiatives further enhance students' understanding of social determinants of health and the impact of systemic inequities on families.

Cultural Competence Training

Students receive specialized training to work effectively with clients from varied cultural, ethnic, and socioeconomic backgrounds. This training includes exploring issues related to identity, power dynamics, and culturally specific healing practices, which are critical for developing respectful and effective therapeutic relationships.

Community Partnerships

Collaborations with local organizations allow students to participate in outreach, prevention, and intervention programs that serve underrepresented communities. These partnerships enrich clinical training and contribute to the university's mission of social responsibility.

csulb marriage and family therapy: Angry White Men Michael Kimmel, 2017-04-25 One of the headlines of the 2012 Presidential campaign was the demise of the white American male voter as a dominant force in the political landscape. On election night four years later, when Donald Trump was announced the winner, it became clear that the white American male voter is alive and well and angry as hell. Sociologist Michael Kimmel, one of the leading writers on men and masculinity in the world today, has spent hundreds of hours in the company of America's angry white men - from white supremacists to men's rights activists to young students. In Angry White Men, he presents a comprehensive diagnosis of their fears, anxieties, and rage. Kimmel locates this increase in anger in the seismic economic, social and political shifts that have so transformed the American landscape. Downward mobility, increased racial and gender equality, and a tenacious clinging to an anachronistic ideology of masculinity has left many men feeling betrayed and bewildered. Raised to expect unparalleled social and economic privilege, white men are suffering today from what Kimmel calls aggrieved entitlement: a sense that those benefits that white men believed were their due have been snatched away from them. Angry White Men discusses, among others, the sons of small town America, scarred by underemployment and wage stagnation. When America's white men feel they've lived their lives the 'right' way - worked hard and stayed out of trouble - and still do not get economic rewards, then they have to blame somebody else. Even more terrifying is the phenomenon of angry young boys. School shootings in the United States are not just the work of misguided youth or troubled teens -- they're all committed by boys. These alienated young men are transformed into mass murderers by a sense that using violence against others is their right. The election of Donald Trump proved that angry white men can still change the course of history. Here, Kimmel argues that they should walk openly and honorably alongside those they've spent so long trying to exclude, in order to be happier and healthier.

csulb marriage and family therapy: The Palgrave Handbook of Male Psychology and Mental Health John A. Barry, Roger Kingerlee, Martin Seager, Luke Sullivan, 2019-03-01 This Handbook represents the first concerted effort to understand male mental health in a way that facilitates a positive step forward in both theory and treatment. An alarming number of men experience serious mental health issues, as demonstrated by high rates of suicide and violent offending. Despite these problems, the study of male psychology has either been overlooked, or viewed as a problem of defective masculinity. This handbook brings together experts from across the world to discuss men's mental health, from prenatal development, through childhood, adolescence, and fatherhood. Men and masculinity are explored from multiple perspectives including evolutionary, cross-cultural, cognitive, biological, developmental, and existential viewpoints, with a focus on practical suggestions and demonstrations of successful clinical work with men. Throughout, chapters question existing models of understanding and treating men's mental health and explore new approaches, theories and interventions. This definitive handbook encapsulates a new wave of positive theory and practice in the field of male psychology and will be of great value to professionals, academics, and those working with males through the lifespan in any sector related to male mental health and wellbeing.

What it looks like and why we need to take it seriously This book draws attention to the second sexism, where it exists, how it works and what it looks like, and responds to those who would deny that it exists. Challenging conventional ways of thinking, it examines controversial issues such as sex-based affirmative action, gender roles, and charges of anti-feminism. The book offers an academically rigorous argument in an accessible style, including the careful use of empirical data, and includes examples and engages in a discussion of how sex discrimination against men and boys also undermines the cause for female equality.
