Overview of Fort Worth ISD Special Education

Fort Worth ISD special education is committed to delivering high-quality educational opportunities that accommodate the individual needs of students with disabilities. The district follows the guidelines set forth by the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), ensuring that all eligible students receive a Free Appropriate Public Education (FAPE) in the least restrictive environment possible. Fort Worth ISD offers a continuum of services designed to support a broad spectrum of disabilities, including learning disabilities, speech and language impairments, emotional disturbances, and physical disabilities. This comprehensive approach promotes student success by integrating specialized instruction, assistive technology, and behavioral support.

Mission and Vision

The mission of Fort Worth ISD special education is to empower students with disabilities to achieve academic excellence, independence, and social integration. The district envisions a community where all students receive equitable access to education and develop the skills necessary for lifelong success. This vision is supported by qualified educators, evidence-based practices, and continuous collaboration between school staff, families, and community partners.

Student Population Served

Fort Worth ISD serves thousands of students with disabilities across various age groups and grade levels. The special education programs cater to students with mild to severe disabilities, addressing individual learning goals through personalized education plans. The district's inclusive philosophy ensures that many students participate in general education classrooms with appropriate accommodations and supports.

Eligibility and Evaluation Process

Determining eligibility for Fort Worth ISD special education services involves a comprehensive evaluation process designed to identify a student's strengths and areas of need. The evaluation is conducted by a multidisciplinary team and considers various data sources, including academic performance, behavioral observations, and standardized assessments. This process ensures that only students who meet the criteria under IDEA receive specialized services.

Referral and Screening

Students suspected of having a disability can be referred for evaluation by parents, teachers, or other school personnel. Once a referral is made, initial screenings are conducted to gather preliminary information and determine if a full evaluation is warranted. This step helps identify students who may benefit from special education interventions.

Comprehensive Evaluation

The comprehensive evaluation includes assessments in multiple areas such as cognitive abilities, academic achievement, communication skills, social-emotional functioning, and physical health. The evaluation team collaborates to compile results and determine eligibility based on state and federal guidelines. Parental consent is required before any formal assessment takes place.

Individualized Education Program (IEP) Development

For students found eligible, an Individualized Education Program (IEP) is developed. This legally binding document outlines specific educational goals, accommodations, modifications, and related services tailored to the student's unique needs. The IEP team includes educators, specialists, the student (when appropriate), and family members, ensuring a collaborative approach to planning and support.

Special Education Services and Programs

Fort Worth ISD special education offers a wide array of services designed to address the diverse needs of students with disabilities. These services range from direct instruction and therapeutic supports to assistive technology and transition planning. The district provides both in-district and specialized program options to meet varying levels of need.

Instructional Services

Instructional services include specially designed teaching strategies that accommodate different learning styles and disabilities. These services may be delivered in resource rooms, self-contained classrooms, or through inclusion in general education settings with support. The goal is to foster academic growth while promoting independence and self-advocacy skills.

Related Services

In addition to academic instruction, students may receive related services such as speech therapy, occupational therapy, physical therapy, counseling, and transportation. These services support the overall development of students and remove barriers to learning.

Assistive Technology

Fort Worth ISD special education utilizes assistive technology tools to enhance communication, mobility, and access to the curriculum. Devices such as speech-generating devices, adaptive keyboards, and software applications are employed based on individual student needs.

Transition Services

The district provides transition planning for students approaching the end of their K-12 education. These services prepare students for post-secondary education, employment, and independent living by developing skills, connecting with community resources, and coordinating with adult service agencies.

Inclusion and Support Strategies

Inclusion is a foundational principle within Fort Worth ISD special education, promoting the participation of students with disabilities in general education classrooms alongside their peers. The district implements various strategies to support inclusive education and create an environment conducive to learning for all students.

Co-Teaching Models

Co-teaching involves collaboration between general education and special education teachers to deliver instruction in the same classroom. This model benefits students by providing differentiated instruction and immediate support while maintaining access to the general curriculum.

Accommodations and Modifications

Accommodations adjust how a student learns material, such as extended time or preferential seating, whereas modifications alter what a student is expected to learn. Fort Worth ISD ensures that these supports are clearly outlined in each student's IEP and consistently implemented to promote academic success.

Behavioral Supports

Positive Behavior Interventions and Supports (PBIS) and individualized behavior intervention plans are utilized to address behavioral challenges. These strategies aim to improve social skills, reduce disruptive behaviors, and enhance the overall classroom environment.

Family Involvement and Resources

Fort Worth ISD recognizes that family engagement is crucial to the success of students receiving special education services. The district provides numerous resources and opportunities for families to participate actively in their child's education and collaborate with school staff.

Parent Training and Support

Workshops, informational sessions, and support groups are available to help families understand special education laws, navigate the IEP process, and advocate effectively for their children. These programs empower parents with knowledge and tools to support their child's development.

Communication and Collaboration

Regular communication between parents and educators is prioritized through conferences, progress reports, and collaborative meetings. This ongoing dialogue ensures that families remain informed and involved in decision-making regarding their child's educational program.

Community Resources

Fort Worth ISD connects families with external agencies and organizations that offer additional support services such as healthcare, counseling, and recreational programs tailored to children with disabilities. These partnerships extend the continuum of care beyond the school setting.

Legal Framework and Compliance

Fort Worth ISD special education operates in strict adherence to federal and state laws designed to protect the rights of students with disabilities. Compliance ensures that the district maintains high standards for service delivery, accountability, and nondiscrimination.

Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA)

IDEA mandates that eligible students receive a Free Appropriate Public Education (FAPE) in the Least Restrictive Environment (LRE). Fort Worth ISD aligns its policies and procedures with these requirements to guarantee equitable educational opportunities.

Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act

Section 504 protects students with disabilities from discrimination and mandates reasonable accommodations in schools. Fort Worth ISD implements 504 plans for students who may not qualify for special education but still require supports to access their education.

State Regulations and Monitoring

The Texas Education Agency (TEA) oversees the implementation of special education programs within Fort Worth ISD, conducting regular audits and monitoring to ensure compliance with state standards. The district maintains rigorous documentation and continuous improvement initiatives to meet these expectations.

Due Process and Dispute Resolution

Fort Worth ISD provides mechanisms for resolving disagreements between families and the district regarding special education services. These include mediation, due process hearings, and complaint procedures designed to protect the rights of students and families.

- Comprehensive evaluation and eligibility determination
- Individualized Education Programs (IEPs)
- Inclusive classroom models and co-teaching
- Related services such as therapy and counseling
- Assistive technology and transition planning
- Family engagement and community partnerships
- Legal compliance with IDEA and Section 504

fort worth isd special education: Fort Worth from World War II to 1960 Harold Rich, 2025-09-15 Fort Worth from World War II to 1960 reviews Fort Worth's history during the challenging times of World War II, the postwar adjustment period, and the first full decade of the Cold War. Harold Rich tells the story in broad strokes with foci on local crime and criminals, vice, the police, race relations, and economic development. What emerges is a portrait of a growing city developing major urban accoutrements such as industrialization, freeways, and an art infrastructure while also struggling with an active and sizable criminal underworld and the emerging Civil Rights Movement. The overall impression is that the nearly two decades from 1942 to 1960 were critical to transitioning Fort Worth from a nineteenth- to a twentieth-century city, but the end result was not an unqualified success. Fort Worth would achieve significant economic progress in the 1940s, especially from the addition of Convair, that would expand its population at a fast pace but would lose much of that momentum in the 1950s. During both decades the police confronted rising demands related to traffic control and internal corruption that most notably affected their ability to deal with gambling and prostitution, both of which seemed to be everywhere. As the 1950s drew to a close, both vices began to subside, more from a decline in public acceptance than from police activity. In the 1940s and 1950s, Fort Worth's criminal underworld was a major presence, heavily involved in vice and in several daring robberies, including a thwarted plan to rob Carswell Air Force Base. The most notorious gangsters met their ends in a long-running series of internal conflicts that began during the war and destroyed most of that underworld. At the same time, the postwar period witnessed the spread of illegal drug use across broad societal lines, sparking a corresponding response by police. In contrast, little changed regarding race relations despite the efforts of many local activists and favorable rulings emanating from the nation's courts. More significant progress would come in the 1960s and accelerate thereafter.

fort worth isd special education: Characteristics of the 100 Largest Public Elementary and Secondary School Districts in the United States, 1992-93 John P. Sietsema, Jonaki Bose, 1995 This publication provides basic descriptive information about the 100 largest school districts in the United States and its outlying areas. The information was provided by state education agencies about student membership, revenues, and expenditures. The 100 largest districts, representing fewer than 1% of the nation's school districts, serve about 23% of public school students and employ about 23% of public school teachers. Almost all of these districts encompass large cities, but only about half are confined to city limits. One-third of these districts are found in Florida, Texas, and California; and more than half of these large districts have minority enrollment of over 50%. In addition, schools in the 100 largest districts tend to be about 38% larger than the average American school. Information on school and student characteristics and school finances is presented in 10 basic tables. Three text tables establish a meaningful context for the information on the 100 school districts. Appendixes list the 500 largest school districts, and an alphabetical list of the 500 districts. Frisby, 2013-03-11 Dr. Frisby focuses a bright light on issues that often remain obscured in a fog of polemics, deeply held convictions, and genuine concern for the plight of minority students. Meeting the Psychoeducational Needs of Minority Students cuts through this fog with intense, sharp, clear thinking and data-driven conclusions. Jeffrey P. Braden, PhD, Professor of Psychology and Dean of the College of Humanities and Social Sciences, North Carolina State University Going beyond superficial 'feel good' or 'feel bad' ideologies to probe what really makes a difference in meeting the needs of often underserved populations, Craig Frisby provides a comprehensive, rigorous, well-written, and entertaining (honest!) work that addresses the intersection of race, ethnicity, and education. Betty Henry, PhD, School Psychologist, California School for the Blind Dr. Frisby makes a perceptive and incisive assessment of much of the multicultural ideology currently propagated in professional psychology and education and directly confronts some of the major issues surrounding multiculturalism. Unlike many other critiques that have been proffered over the last few fort worth isd special education: University and School Connections Irma N. Guadarrama, John Ramsey, Janice L. Nath, 2008-06-01 The need for strengthening the connections between university-based teacher education programs and schools has never been greater in an era where standards and accountability systems often play centric roles in practically all aspects of the education field. Within this context, university educators and school practitioners have increasingly focused their attention on how professional development schools produce the multiplicity of outcomes that address the exigencies of quality programs for educating teachers and improving school achievement. In keeping with the mission of producing a collection of papers that inform, enlighten, and motivate readers, Volume 3 of the Professional Development Schools book series provides practitioners and researchers with articles on a substantial variety of themes on the most recent developments of the field. Among the thematic threads that organize Volume 3 are 1) using the national standards to examine and evaluate PDSs; 2) implementation, development and leadership issues relevant to beginning and experienced PDSs; 3) using innovative means for student assessments and mentoring in preservice education within a PDS context; 4) the impact of PDSs on teacher education and student achievement; and 5) cases of PDSs and the value of lessons learned. Volume 3 is similar to the previous two volumes in that it includes both practitioner and researcher strands, however, the authors in the current volume carry a sense of maturity and exudes a tone of confidence in their voice. Professional development schools research is an important aspect of teacher education. The collection of articles in Volume 3 contribute to our understanding of their essential qualities and offer assurance that innovation, change, and quality are building blocks in professional development schools.

Almost one in every four public school students in the country is served by one of these districts. They are distinguished from smaller districts by characteristics other than sheer size, such as average and median school size, pupil-teacher ratios, numbers of high school graduates, numbers of students receiving special education services, and minority enrollment as a proportion of total enrollment. The 100 largest districts employ 19.9% of the nation's public school teachers and account for 16.6% of the nation's schools and 19.2% of its high school graduates. Almost all of these districts encompass large cities, but only about half are confined to the city limits. Three states, Florida, Texas, and California, accounted for over one-third of these districts. More than half of these districts have over 50% minority enrollment. Current expenditures per pupil in the 100 largest school districts ranged from a low of $2,052 in the Puerto Rican Department of Education to a high of $9,501 in Newark, New Jersey Public Schools. fort worth isd special education: Oaxaca al Gusto Diana Kennedy, 2011-12-01 No one has done more to introduce the world to the authentic, flavorful cuisines of Mexico than Diana Kennedy. Acclaimed as the Julia Child of Mexican cooking, Kennedy has been an intrepid, indefatigable student of Mexican foodways for more than fifty years and has published several classic books on the subject, including The Cuisines of Mexico (now available in The Essential Cuisines of Mexico, a compilation of her first three books), The Art of Mexican Cooking, My Mexico, and From My Mexican Kitchen. Her uncompromising insistence on using the proper local ingredients and preparation techniques has taught generations of cooks how to prepare—and savor—the delicious, subtle, and varied tastes of Mexico. In Oaxaca al Gusto, Kennedy takes us on an amazing journey into one of the most outstanding and colorful cuisines in the world. The state of Oaxaca is one of the most diverse in Mexico, with many different cultural and linguistic groups, often living in areas difficult to access. Each group has its own distinctive cuisine, and Diana Kennedy has spent many years traveling the length and breadth of Oaxaca to record in words and photographs these little-known foods, both wild and cultivated, the way they were prepared, and the part they play in the daily or festive life of the communities I visited. Oaxaca al Gusto is the fruit of these labors—and the culmination of Diana Kennedy's life's work. Organized by regions, Oaxaca al Gusto presents some three hundred recipes—most from home cooks—for traditional Oaxacan dishes. Kennedy accompanies each recipe with fascinating notes about the ingredients, cooking techniques, and the food's place in family and communal life. Lovely color photographs illustrate the food and its preparation. A special feature of the book is a chapter devoted to the three pillars of the Oaxacan regional cuisines—chocolate, corn, and chiles. Notes to the cook, a glossary, a bibliography, and an index complete the volume. An irreplaceable record of the infinite world of Oaxacan gastronomy, Oaxaca al Gusto belongs on the shelf of everyone who treasures the world's traditional regional cuisines.
