Core Values of Army Leadership

The foundations of army leadership are deeply rooted in a set of core values that every leader must embody. These values serve as the moral compass and ethical framework guiding leaders' actions and decisions. Upholding these principles ensures trust, respect, and cohesion within military units, which are critical for operational success.

Loyalty

Loyalty is the unwavering allegiance to the Constitution, the Army, and fellow soldiers. It requires leaders to put the welfare of their unit and mission above personal interests, fostering a unified and dedicated team.

Duty

Duty involves fulfilling obligations and completing assigned tasks with excellence. Army leaders accept responsibility for their actions and the well-being of their soldiers, ensuring mission accomplishment despite obstacles.

Respect

Respect is recognizing the inherent dignity and worth of all individuals. Leaders must treat soldiers fairly and foster an environment of inclusivity and mutual understanding.

Selfless Service

Selfless service prioritizes the needs of the nation, the Army, and the unit over personal gain. Leaders demonstrate this value by making sacrifices to ensure the success of the collective effort.

Honor

Honor reflects adherence to ethical standards and personal integrity. It drives leaders to act honestly and uphold the reputation of the Army at all times.

Integrity

Integrity requires leaders to be truthful and accountable, even when faced with difficult decisions. It builds trust within the chain of command and among soldiers.

Personal Courage

Personal courage empowers leaders to confront fear, danger, or adversity, whether physical or moral. This value inspires confidence and resilience throughout the unit.

Key Attributes and Competencies

Beyond core values, the foundations of army leadership include specific attributes and competencies that enable leaders to perform effectively. These qualities distinguish proficient leaders and contribute to mission success.

Character

Character embodies the moral and ethical qualities that define a leader's identity. It influences decision-making, fosters credibility, and maintains discipline within the ranks.

Presence

Presence refers to a leader's demeanor, confidence, and conduct. A strong presence commands respect and motivates soldiers, especially during challenging situations.

Intellect

Intellect involves mental agility, sound judgment, and the ability to understand complex situations. Effective leaders apply critical thinking and problem-solving skills to adapt tactics and strategies.

Leads

This competency focuses on influencing others, communicating clearly, and building cohesive teams. Leaders must inspire trust and effectively convey intent to ensure coordinated efforts.

Develops

Developing subordinates and peers is vital for sustaining leadership excellence. Leaders invest in training, mentorship, and professional growth to prepare their units for future challenges.

Achieves

Achieving results is the culmination of leadership efforts. It requires setting clear goals, managing resources efficiently, and maintaining focus on mission objectives despite adversity.

Leadership Roles and Responsibilities

The foundations of army leadership also encompass the distinct roles and responsibilities entrusted to leaders at various levels. Understanding these duties ensures clarity and accountability within the command structure.

Leading by Example

Army leaders set the standard through their actions and behavior. By demonstrating professionalism, discipline, and commitment, they inspire soldiers to emulate these qualities.

Decision Making

Leaders are responsible for making timely and informed decisions that affect personnel, operations, and resources. Effective decision-making balances risks and benefits to optimize mission success.

Communication

Clear and effective communication is essential for conveying orders, intent, and feedback. Leaders must also listen actively to understand the needs and concerns of their soldiers.

Training and Development

Ensuring that soldiers are well-trained and prepared is a critical responsibility. Leaders plan and execute training programs that enhance skills and readiness.

Welfare and Morale

Leaders are accountable for the physical and mental well-being of their soldiers. Maintaining morale through support and recognition strengthens unit cohesion and effectiveness.

Developing Effective Army Leaders

Developing leadership capabilities is a continuous process essential to the foundations of army leadership. The Army invests significant resources in education, training, and experiential learning to cultivate competent leaders.

Formal Education and Training

Structured courses and academies provide foundational knowledge and leadership theories. These programs emphasize ethics, tactics, and management skills tailored to military contexts.

Mentorship

Experienced leaders mentor junior personnel, offering guidance, feedback, and support. This relationship accelerates professional growth and reinforces leadership principles.

Practical Experience

Hands-on leadership in real-world scenarios allows individuals to apply concepts and develop resilience. Field exercises, deployments, and command assignments are critical for experiential learning.

Self-Development

Leaders must engage in continuous self-improvement through reading, reflection, and seeking feedback. This proactive approach ensures adaptability and lifelong leadership growth.

Challenges and Adaptations in Army Leadership

The foundations of army leadership are tested by evolving challenges that require adaptability and innovation. Modern leaders must navigate complex operational environments and diverse personnel needs.

Technological Advancements

Rapid changes in technology impact warfare and communication. Leaders must stay informed and leverage new tools to maintain tactical advantages.

Cultural Competence

Operating in multinational and multicultural settings demands sensitivity and inclusiveness. Leaders must foster respect and understanding among diverse teams.

Psychological Resilience

Leaders face stressors such as combat, uncertainty, and high-stakes decisions. Building psychological resilience helps maintain mental health and performance under pressure.

Ethical Dilemmas

Complex missions often present moral challenges. Leaders rely on the foundations of army leadership values to navigate these dilemmas with integrity.

1. Uphold core values consistently
2. Enhance leadership attributes through training
3. Fulfill leadership roles responsibly
4. Commit to continuous development
5. Adapt to emerging challenges effectively

Frequently Asked Questions

What are the key principles of the Army Leadership Requirements Model?

The Army Leadership Requirements Model is based on three core attributes: character, presence, and intellect, and three core competencies: leads, develops, and achieves. These principles guide leaders in effectively influencing and motivating soldiers to accomplish missions.

How does the Army define leadership at the foundational level?

At the foundational level, Army leadership is defined as the ability to influence, lead, and motivate soldiers to accomplish the mission while caring for their welfare and developing them for future roles.

Why is character considered a fundamental attribute of Army leadership?

Character is fundamental because it embodies the Army values, ethical behavior, and moral courage that build trust and credibility, which are essential for effective leadership and decision-making in challenging situations.

What role does communication play in the foundations of Army leadership?

Communication is critical as it ensures clear understanding of missions, expectations, and feedback between leaders and soldiers, fostering teamwork, trust, and mission accomplishment.

How does the Army Leadership Development Model support the growth of leaders?

The model emphasizes continuous learning through formal education, self-development, and experiential learning, enabling leaders to develop the necessary attributes and competencies to lead effectively at various levels.

What is the importance of presence in Army leadership?

Presence refers to a leader's outward appearance, demeanor, and conduct, which influence soldiers' confidence and morale. A strong presence helps leaders inspire trust and command respect.

How do Army leaders balance mission accomplishment with soldier welfare?

Effective Army leaders prioritize mission accomplishment while ensuring the health, safety, and well-being of their soldiers, recognizing that caring for personnel enhances unit cohesion and long-term success.

What competencies are essential for developing subordinates in the Army?

Key competencies include mentoring, coaching, counseling, and providing constructive feedback, which help develop soldiers' skills, confidence, and readiness for increased responsibilities.

How does ethical decision-making fit into the foundations of Army leadership?

Ethical decision-making is integral, as leaders must consistently apply Army values and moral principles to make sound decisions that maintain trust, uphold discipline, and ensure mission integrity.

foundations of army leadership: 21st Century U.S. Military Manuals Department of Defense, U. S. Military, U. S. Army, 2018-03-20 This Army Field Manual is a capstone manual which describes the Army's view of leadership, outlines the levels of leadership (direct, organizational, and strategic), and describes the attributes and core leader competencies across all levels. The principal audience for ADRP 6-22 is all leaders, military and civilian. Trainers and educators throughout the Army will also use this publication. Commanders, staffs, and subordinates ensure their decisions and actions comply with applicable United States, international, and, in some cases, host-nation laws and regulations. Commanders at all levels ensure their Soldiers operate in accordance with the law of war and the rules of engagement. It establishes and describes the leader attributes and core leader competencies that facilitate focused feedback, education, training, and development across all leadership levels. An ideal Army leader has strong intellect, physical presence, professional competence, moral character and serves as a role model. An Army leader is able and willing to act decisively, within the intent and purpose of superior leaders and in the best interest of the organization. Army leaders recognize that organizations, built on mutual trust and confidence, successfully accomplish missions. Everyone in the Army is part of a team and functions in the role of leader and subordinate. Being a good subordinate is part of being a good leader. All Soldiers and Army Civilians must serve as leaders and followers. It is important to understand that leaders do not just lead subordinates-they also lead other leaders. Leaders are not always designated by position, rank, or authority. ADRP 6-22 addresses the following topics necessary to become a competent, multiskilled, and agile Army leader: - Understand the Army definitions of leader and leadership. - Use the Army leadership requirements model as a common basis for thinking and learning about leadership and associated doctrine. - Become knowledgeable about the roles and relationships of leaders, including the role of subordinate or team member. - Discover what makes a good leader: a person of character with presence and intellect. - Learn how to lead, develop, and achieve through competency-based leadership. - Identify the influences and stresses in our changing environment that affect leadership. - Understand the basics of leading at the direct, organizational, and strategic levels. Part One defines leadership, describes the foundations of Army leadership, and introduces the Army Leadership Requirements Model in Chapter 1. Part Two describes the leader attributes of character, presence, and intellect. Part Three describes the core leader competencies and their application. Part Four addresses the roles and responsibilities of organizational leaders in Chapter 10 and strategic leaders in Chapter 11.
