Origins and Establishment

The Inception of the Idaho Potato Bowl

The Idaho Potato Bowl was first played in 1997, initially known as the Humanitarian Bowl. It was created to provide a postseason opportunity for college football teams from mid-major conferences, especially those not typically invited to the more prominent bowl games. The game was established in Boise, Idaho, with the aim of promoting both college football and the state's agricultural pride, particularly its renowned potato industry. The bowl's location at Bronco Stadium on the campus of Boise State University offered a picturesque setting and a passionate fan base.

Motivation Behind the Bowl's Creation

The Humanitarian Bowl's creation was motivated by a desire to increase visibility for smaller conferences and to boost tourism in the Boise area during the late fall and early winter months. With college football bowl games becoming increasingly popular, the organizers sought to capitalize on this trend by hosting a game that would showcase talent from the Western Athletic Conference (WAC) and other similar leagues. Additionally, the bowl served as a platform to celebrate Idaho's agricultural contributions, particularly the potato, which is a major economic driver in the state.

Evolution of the Bowl Game

Changes in Name and Sponsorship

Over the years, the Idaho Potato Bowl underwent several changes in its official name and sponsorship. Originally called the Humanitarian Bowl, the game was renamed in 2011 to the Famous Idaho Potato Bowl to better emphasize the state's potato industry. Sponsorship changes reflected the bowl's growing commercial appeal, with various regional and national companies supporting the event. The rebranding to the Idaho Potato Bowl aligned the game more closely with Idaho's identity and helped differentiate it from other postseason games.

Conference Tie-Ins and Team Selection

The bowl has traditionally featured teams from mid-major conferences such as the Mountain West Conference and the Mid-American Conference (MAC). These tie-ins have helped maintain competitive and regionally relevant matchups, often pitting teams with similar levels of talent and fan interest. Over time, the Idaho Potato Bowl has adapted its selection criteria based on changes in conference alignments and NCAA regulations, ensuring that participating teams bring excitement and strong fan support to the game.

Notable Games and Moments

Memorable Matchups

Throughout its history, the Idaho Potato Bowl has produced several memorable games that showcased thrilling plays and dramatic finishes. For instance, the 2009 matchup between Nevada and Bowling Green featured a high-scoring contest that kept fans on the edge of their seats until the final whistle. Another notable game was the 2015 contest where the Utah State Aggies secured a narrow victory, highlighting the competitiveness and unpredictability that define the bowl.

Record-Breaking Performances

Several players have etched their names into the Idaho Potato Bowl record books with standout performances. Quarterbacks, running backs, and defensive players have all contributed to the game's highlight reels with record-setting yardage, touchdowns, and interceptions. These individual achievements have helped elevate the bowl's prestige and provided a platform for athletes to showcase their skills on a national stage.

Impact on Local Community and Economy

Boost to Boise's Economy

The Idaho Potato Bowl has consistently contributed to the local economy by attracting visitors, media, and teams to Boise. Hotels, restaurants, and retail businesses benefit from the influx of fans and personnel associated with the game. The timing of the bowl in late December also helps extend the tourist season in the region, providing economic activity during a typically slower period.

Community Engagement and Charitable Efforts

Beyond economic benefits, the bowl game has fostered community pride and engagement through various outreach programs and charitable initiatives. Organizers often collaborate with local schools, nonprofits, and civic organizations to promote education, health, and wellness. These efforts reinforce the bowl's role as a positive force in the Boise community and deepen the connection between the game and Idaho's residents.

Sponsorship and Branding Changes

Evolution of Corporate Partnerships

The Idaho Potato Bowl's sponsorship landscape has evolved in tandem with the broader commercialization of college football. Corporate partners have ranged from agricultural companies to national brands seeking to leverage the bowl's unique identity. These partnerships have provided financial support necessary for the bowl's operations, marketing, and prize funds, ensuring its sustainability and growth.

Branding Focus on Idaho's Potato Industry

The decision to rename the bowl to highlight Idaho's potato industry was a strategic branding move that aligned the game with the state's most famous agricultural product. This branding has included promotional campaigns emphasizing Idaho potatoes and their cultural significance, integrating the bowl game into the state's larger marketing efforts. Such alignment has helped the Idaho Potato Bowl carve out a distinct niche in the crowded college football postseason landscape.

idaho potato bowl history: An Invitation to Slow Mark R. McMinn, Lisa Graham McMinn, 2024-10-22 We live in a day of fast information, fast fingers, fast food, fast shipping, fast words, fast anger, and fast judgment. Our fight-or-flight impulses keep us on high alert, aided by mobile devices that vibrate each time another crisis strikes. All this fastness can easily interfere with a slow, intentional life grounded in God's love. Christian faith has deep treasures and practices to offer us. How will we live, and who will we be in this highly charged era where politics, economics, environment, and social norms are under significant duress? Come explore quieter, more intentional ways of being, and how these might attune us to the slow work of God in order that we might love one another and the world as God does. Our chapters pair a lure to move fast with an invitation to slow. Becoming slow to anger is an invitation to empathy, slow to judge is an invitation to humility, and slow to grasp is an invitation to contentment. Ultimately, each of these invitations is a movement toward God.

Also there is a chapter on faith promoting stories from family history experiences and a chapter on family stories and descendant charts of the Grigg family. There is information on how modern research techniques using computers, digitizing of records and the internet facilitates the researching and finding of your ancestors. The last chapter is an update and republishing of the the book titled Parley M. Grigg, Jr. and Thankful Halsey Gardners Descendants and History published in 1992. This correlated publication shows that in all ages of the world since the creation of Adam, God has desired His Holy Ordinances to be done in a House built to His name, namely a Temple of God. This compilation is also designed to show that Jesus plan of redemption for all mankind includes vicarious ordinance work for the dead to be done in Gods Holy Temples by those living in the Dispensation of the Fullness of Times. This was all in Gods plan for the redemption of all mankind before the foundation of this world.

idaho potato bowl history: Survival of the City Edward Glaeser, David Cutler, 2021-09-07 One of our great urbanists and one of our great public health experts join forces to reckon with how cities are changing in the face of existential threats the pandemic has only accelerated Cities can make us sick. They always have—diseases spread more easily when more people are close to one another. And disease is hardly the only ill that accompanies urban density. Cities have been demonized as breeding grounds for vice and crime from Sodom and Gomorrah on. But cities have flourished nonetheless because they are humanity's greatest invention, indispensable engines for creativity, innovation, wealth, and connection, the loom on which the fabric of civilization is woven. But cities now stand at a crossroads. During the global COVID crisis, cities grew silent as people worked from home—if they could work at all. The normal forms of socializing ground to a halt. How permanent are these changes? Advances in digital technology mean that many people can opt out of city life as never before. Will they? Are we on the brink of a post-urban world? City life will survive but individual cities face terrible risks, argue Edward Glaeser and David Cutler, and a wave of urban failure would be absolutely disastrous. In terms of intimacy and inspiration, nothing can replace what cities offer. Great cities have always demanded great management, and our current crisis has exposed fearful gaps in our capacity for good governance. It is possible to drive a city into the ground, pandemic or not. Glaeser and Cutler examine the evolution that is already happening, and describe the possible futures that lie before us: What will distinguish the cities that will flourish from the ones that won't? In America, they argue, deep inequities in health care and education are a particular blight on the future of our cities; solving them will be the difference between our collective good health and a downward spiral to a much darker place.

idaho potato bowl history: Land of the Underground Rain Donald E. Green, 2014-07-03 The scarcity of surface water which has so marked the Great Plains is even more characteristic of its subdivision, the Texas High Plains. Settlers on the plateau were forced to use pump technology to tap the vast ground water resources—the underground rain—beneath its flat surface. The evolution from windmills to the modern high-speed irrigation pumps took place over several decades. Three phases characterized the movement toward irrigation. In the period from 1910 to 1920, large-volume pumping plants first appeared in the region, but, due to national and regional circumstances, these premature efforts were largely abortive. The second phase began as a response to the drouth of the Dust Bowl and continued into the 1950s. By 1959, irrigation had become an important aspect of the flourishing High Plains economy. The decade of the 1960s was characterized chiefly by a growing alarm over the declining ground water table caused by massive pumping, and by investigations of other water sources. Land of the Underground Rain is a study in human use and threatened exhaustion of the High Plains' most valuable natural resource. Ground water was so plentiful that settlers believed it flowed inexhaustibly from some faraway place or mysteriously from a giant underground river. Whatever the source, they believed that it was being constantly replenished, and until the 1950s they generally opposed effective conservation of ground water. A growing number of weak and dry wells then made it apparent that Plains residents were mining an exhaustible resource. The Texas High Plains region has been far more successful in exploiting its resource than in conserving it. The very success of its pump technology has produced its environmental crisis. The problem brought about by the threatened exhaustion of this resource still awaits a solution. This study is the first comprehensive history of irrigation on the Texas High Plains, and it is the first comprehensive treatment of the development of twentieth-century pump irrigation in any area of the United States.

idaho potato bowl history: Boqueria Yann de Rochefort, Zack Bezunartea, Marc Vidal, 2018-05-01 A sublime collection of traditional Spanish and Tapas recipes. Boqueria captures the soul of Spanish cuisine. --James Beard Award-winning chef and cookbook author Alfred Portale For over a decade New York City's famed Boqueria restaurants have been distilling the energy, atmosphere, and flavors of Barcelona, becoming a place where patrons share excellent wine and exquisite dishes. From traditional tapas like crispy patatas bravas and bacon-wrapped dates to classic favorites like garlicky sautéed shrimp, pork meatballs, and saffron-spiced seafood paella, Boqueria captures the very best of Spanish cuisine. For this sumptuous cookbook, restaurateur Yann de Rochefort and Executive Chef Marc Vidal tell the story of Boqueria, which has now spread to four New York City locations as well as to Washington, D.C. While the recipes-all deeply rooted in Barcelona's culinary culture-take center stage with phenomenal food photography, Boqueria also swings open the kitchen doors to reveal the bustling life of the restaurant, and offers exciting glimpses of the locales that inspire it: the bars, markets, and cervezerias of Barcelona. Transporting us to the busy, colorful stalls of legendary fresh market La Boqueria, these portraits of the Spanish city are so vibrant that you can almost smell the Mediterranean's salt air. Boqueria's recipes are delectable variations on authentic Barcelona fare, but more than that; along with their origin stories, these recipes inspire a bit of the Boqueria experience-the cooking, the conversations, and the connections-in your own home.
