Mission and Objectives of the Poverty & Race Research Action Council

The Poverty & Race Research Action Council is committed to dismantling the intertwined barriers of poverty and racial discrimination through informed research and effective advocacy. Its core mission centers on promoting racial and economic justice by addressing segregation, discrimination, and unequal access to resources. The council emphasizes the importance of data-driven solutions to improve policy frameworks and community outcomes.

Core Goals of PRRAC

PRRAC's objectives include:

- Conducting and disseminating research on the racial dimensions of poverty and inequality.
- Influencing public policy to advance racial equity and reduce economic disparities.

- Supporting grassroots organizations and coalitions working on poverty and race issues.
- Raising public awareness about systemic discrimination and its impact on marginalized communities.
- Promoting fair housing, education, and employment opportunities for all racial groups.

Research Focus and Key Areas of Study

The Poverty & Race Research Action Council undertakes comprehensive studies that examine the structural causes and consequences of racial and economic inequality. Its research covers various domains integral to understanding poverty dynamics among racial groups.

Housing Segregation and Fair Housing

One of PRRAC's primary research areas is housing segregation and its role in perpetuating racial poverty. The council analyzes discriminatory practices in housing markets, zoning laws, and lending, revealing how these factors maintain racial divides and limit opportunities for minority families.

Education Inequality

PRRAC investigates disparities in educational resources, school funding, and access to quality education. Research highlights how racial segregation in schools contributes to achievement gaps and restricts socioeconomic mobility for children of color.

Employment and Economic Opportunity

The council examines labor market discrimination, wage gaps, and barriers to employment faced by racial minorities. This research informs policies aimed at creating equitable job opportunities and reducing poverty among marginalized populations.

Criminal Justice and Social Policy

PRRAC also studies the impact of criminal justice policies on communities of color, including the intersection of incarceration rates and economic deprivation. These insights support advocacy for reforms that address systemic inequities.

Advocacy and Policy Initiatives

Beyond research, the Poverty & Race Research Action Council actively engages in advocacy to translate findings into actionable policy changes. Its initiatives target legislative bodies, federal agencies, and local governments.

Policy Reform Campaigns

PRRAC leads campaigns to reform housing policies that perpetuate segregation, promote equitable school funding models, and support fair employment practices. These campaigns are designed to influence policymakers and create systemic change.

Legal Advocacy and Litigation Support

The council provides expertise and research support for legal challenges against discriminatory practices. Its involvement strengthens cases that seek to uphold civil rights protections and enforce anti-discrimination laws.

Public Education and Awareness

PRRAC organizes conferences, publishes reports, and disseminates educational materials to inform the public and stakeholders about the racial dimensions of poverty. These efforts foster a broader understanding and commitment to social justice.

Impact on Racial and Economic Justice

The contributions of the Poverty & Race Research Action Council have led to measurable advancements in addressing racial disparities in poverty and opportunity. Its research and advocacy have shaped national and local policies that promote integration and equity.

Policy Changes Influenced by PRRAC

Some notable impacts include:

- Increased enforcement of fair housing laws reducing discriminatory practices in rental and homeownership markets.
- Development of policies aimed at reducing school segregation and improving educational equity.
- Implementation of employment initiatives focused on reducing racial wage gaps and promoting diversity in workplaces.

Empowerment of Communities

PRRAC's support for community-based organizations has strengthened grassroots efforts to combat poverty and racial injustice. The council's collaboration has empowered marginalized groups to advocate for their rights effectively.

Collaborations and Community Engagement

The Poverty & Race Research Action Council places significant emphasis on partnerships with academic institutions, advocacy groups, and community organizations. These collaborations enhance the council's ability to address complex social issues holistically.

Academic Partnerships

PRRAC works with universities and research centers to conduct interdisciplinary studies that deepen understanding of poverty and racial inequality. These partnerships foster innovative approaches to social justice research.

Community-Based Collaborations

The council engages directly with affected communities to ensure that research and advocacy efforts reflect lived experiences and local needs. This approach promotes inclusive solutions and strengthens community resilience.

Coalition Building

By building coalitions among diverse organizations, PRRAC amplifies its impact. These alliances facilitate coordinated campaigns and shared resources aimed at dismantling systemic barriers to racial and economic equity.

This text is ideal for upper-level undergraduate or lower-level graduate courses on housing policy, urban studies, inequalities, and planning courses.

poverty race research action council: Introduction to Housing Katrin B. Anacker, Andrew T. Carswell, Sarah D. Kirby, 2025-06-11 This foundational text on housing tenure, housing policy, homelessness, and housing in a global context has been thoroughly updated to reflect changes in the United States during and after the COVID-19 pandemic. This third edition delves into the complexities of housing and related issues, to provide a deep understanding of housing's relationship to national economic factors and housing policies. It features individual chapters authored by experts in the field, offering insights into the physical, social, psychological, economic, and policy dimensions affecting the current housing landscape both in the United States and internationally, while proposing solutions to the challenges presented. This book will appeal to faculty and students in a variety of housing-related courses, and is an essential resource for housing researchers, policymakers, and practitioners.

poverty race research action council: Race Peter Wade, 2015-07-02 Taking a comparative approach, this textbook is a concise introduction to race. Illustrated with detailed examples from around the world, it is organised into two parts. Part I explores the historical changes in ideas about race from the ancient world to the present day, in different corners of the globe. Part II outlines ways in which racial difference and inequality are perceived and enacted in selected regions of the world. Examining how humans have used ideas of physical appearance, heredity and behaviour as criteria for categorising others, the text guides students through provocative questions such as: what is race? Does studying race reinforce racism? Does a colour-blind approach dismantle, or merely mask, racism? How does biology feed into concepts of race? Numerous case studies, photos, figures and tables help students to appreciate the different meanings of race in varied contexts, and end-of-chapter research tasks provide further support for student learning.

poverty race research action council: Public Housing and the Legacy of Segregation Margery Austin Turner, Susan J. Popkin, Lynette A. Rawlings, 2009 For the past two decades the United States has been transforming distressed public housing communities, with three ambitious goals: replace distressed developments with healthy mixed-income communities; help residents relocate to affordable housing, often in the private market; and empower former public housing families toward economic self-sufficiency. The transformation has focused on deconcentrating poverty, but not on the underlying role of racial segregation in creating these distressed communities. In Public Housing and the Legacy of Segregation, scholars and public housing officials assess whether—and how—public housing policies can simultaneously address the problems of poverty race research action council: The Integration Debate Chester Hartman, Gregory Squires, 2009-09-11 Racial integration, and policies intended to achieve greater integration, continue to generate controversy in the United States, with some of the most heated debates taking place among long-standing advocates of racial equality. This book explores both long-standing and emerging controversies over the nation's ongoing struggles with discrimination and segregation. More urgently, it offers guidance on how these barriers can be overcome to achieve truly balanced and integrated living patterns.

poverty race research action council: The Affordable Housing Reader Elizabeth Mueller, J. Rosie Tighe, 2022-07-14 This second edition of The Affordable Housing Reader provides context for current discussions surrounding housing policy, emphasizing the values and assumptions underlying debates over strategies for ameliorating housing problems experienced by low-income residents and communities of color. The authors highlighted in this updated volume address themes central to housing as an area of social policy and to understanding its particular meaning in the United States. These include the long history of racial exclusion and the role that public policy has played in racializing access to decent housing and well-served neighborhoods; the tension between the economic and social goals of housing policy; and the role that housing plays in various aspects of the lives of low- and moderate-income residents. Scholarship and the COVID-19 pandemic are raising awareness of the link between access to adequate housing and other rights and opportunities. This timely reader focuses attention on the results of past efforts and on the urgency of reframing the conversation. It is both an exciting time to teach students about the evolution of United States' housing policy and a challenging time to discuss what policymakers or practitioners can do to effect positive change. This reader is aimed at students, professors, researchers, and professionals of housing policy, public policy, and city planning.

poverty race research action council: Choosing Homes, Choosing Schools Annette Lareau, Kimberly Goyette, 2014-03-31 A series of policy shifts over the past decade promises to change how Americans decide where to send their children to school. In theory, the boom in standardized test scores and charter schools will allow parents to evaluate their assigned neighborhood school, or move in search of a better option. But what kind of data do parents actually use while choosing schools? Are there differences among suburban and urban families? How do parents' choices influence school and residential segregation in America? Choosing Homes, Choosing Schools presents a breakthrough analysis of the new era of school choice, and what it portends for American neighborhoods. The distinguished contributors to Choosing Homes, Choosing Schools investigate the complex relationship between education, neighborhood social networks, and larger patterns of inequality. Paul Jargowsky reviews recent trends in segregation by race and class. His analysis shows that segregation between blacks and whites has declined since 1970, but remains extremely high. Moreover, white families with children are less likely than childless whites to live in neighborhoods with more minority residents. In her chapter, Annette Lareau draws on interviews with parents in three suburban neighborhoods to analyze school-choice decisions. Surprisingly, she finds that middle- and upper-class parents do not rely on active research, such as school tours or test scores. Instead, most simply trust advice from friends and other people in their network. Their decision-making process was largely informal and passive. Eliot Weinginer complements this research when he draws from his data on urban parents. He finds that these families worry endlessly about the selection of a school, and that parents of all backgrounds actively consider alternatives, including charter schools. Middle- and upper-class parents relied more on federally mandated report cards, district websites, and online forums, while working-class parents use network contacts to gain information on school quality. Little previous research has explored what role school concerns play in the preferences of white and minority parents for particular neighborhoods. Featuring innovative work from more than a dozen scholars, Choosing Homes, Choosing Schools adroitly addresses this gap and provides a firmer understanding of how Americans choose where to live and send their children to school.

poverty race research action council: Reclaiming Integration and the Language of Race in the "Post-Racial" Era Curtis L. Ivery, Joshua Bassett, 2015-09-03 The book is divided into two major sections: (1) "Reclaiming Integration"; (2) "Reclaiming the Language of Race." Both sections are located in the context of the "post-racial" era and analyzed by nationally renowned scholars in various dimensions. The purpose of this organization is to link structural efforts to encourage voluntary integration with discursive efforts to broaden our social understanding of race in ways that advance the project of American democracy. It is our firm belief that we cannot achieve meaningful advances against enduring racial inequalities without linking structural impacts of racialization (e.g., racial inequalities in economics, education, healthcare, etc.) to the social discourse of race, specifically in terms of the rejection of post-racial politics that are based on the false idea that racism and discrimination are no longer obstacles to opportunity in the United States.

poverty race research action council: Identity and Power in Narratives of Displacement Katrina M. Powell, 2015-02-11 In this book, Powell examines the ways that identities are constructed in displacement narratives based on cases of eminent domain, natural disaster, and civil unrest, attending specifically to the rhetorical strategies employed as barriers and boundaries intersect with individual lives. She provides a unique method to understand how the displaced move within accepted and subversive discourses, and how representation is a crucial component of that movement. In addition, Powell shows how notions of human rights and the public good are often at odds with individual well-being and result in intriguing intersections between discourses of power and discourses of identity. Given the ever-increasing numbers of displaced persons across the globe, and the layers of displacement experienced by many, this study sheds light on the resources of rhetoric as means of survival and resistance during the globally common experience of displacement.

poverty race research action council: Fire in the Heart Mark R. Warren, 2010-09-02 Fire in the Heart uncovers the dynamic processes through which some white Americans become activists for racial justice. The book reports powerful accounts of the development of racial awareness drawn from in-depth interviews with fifty white activists in the fields of community organizing, education, and criminal justice reform. Drawing extensively on the rich interview material, Mark Warren shows how white Americans can develop a commitment to racial justice, not just because it is the right thing to do, but because they embrace the cause as their own. Contrary to much contemporary thinking on racial issues focused on altruism or interests, Warren finds that cognitive and rational processes alone do little to move whites to action. Rather, the motivation to take and sustain action for racial justice is profoundly moral and relational. Warren shows how white activists come to find common cause with people of color when their core values are engaged, as they build relationships with people of color that lead to caring, and when they develop a vision of a racially just future that they understand to benefit everyone--themselves, other whites, and people of color. Warren also considers the complex dynamics and dilemmas white people face in working in multiracial organizations committed to systemic change in America's racial order, and provides a deeper understanding and appreciation of the role that white people can play in efforts to promote racial justice. The first study of its kind, Fire in the Heart brings to light the perspectives of white people who are working day-to-day to build not a post-racial America but the foundations for a truly multiracial America rooted in a caring, human community with equity and justice at its core.

poverty race research action council: Ethnicity, Race, and Health in Multicultural Societies Raj S Bhopal, 2007-01-11 Most of the industrialized world now comprises of multi-ethnic societies, with people from widely varying ancestry, cultures, languages, and beliefs. With globalization of trade, increasing international travel, and migration, the whole world is destined to become multi-ethnic within the next 20 or 30 years. This poses huge challenges for doctors, nurses, public health practitioners, health care managers, and policy makers who have to meet legal and policy obligations to deliver health outcomes, and provide health care of equal quality and effectiveness. To achieve this, they need a solid understanding of the underlying concepts of race and ethnicity, and how these are applied to achieve better health for ethnic minority populations. They also need to have an awareness of the misuses of these concepts, particularly taking into account the history of racism that permeates many societies to this day. Written in non-technical language, with all terminology explained and defined, this book provides an accessible introduction to these complex issues. The key concepts of race and ethnicity are explained, including their uses and misuses. The strengths and weaknesses of these concepts in terms of epidemiology, policy making, health service planning, research, health care, and health promotion are illustrated. The book emphasises theory, ideas, and principles, and its aims are to help counteract the unethical and atheoretical methods often used to study ethnicity. Practical application of the theory is demonstrated through the use of extensive examples. The conceptual frameworks of ethnicity and race required by practitioners and researchers are slightly different, including the nature of research questions, the relative value of various methods of classification, and the approach to data analysis, presentation, and interpretation, and these differences are made explicit. Overall, the interdependence of theory and practice is demonstrated, making this an ideal foundation text or refresher for those involved in race and ethnicity from a health care perspective.

poverty race research action council: The Affordable Housing Reader Elizabeth J. Mueller, J. Rosie Tighe, 2013-03-05 The Affordable Housing Reader brings together classic works and contemporary writing on the themes and debates that have animated the field of affordable housing policy as well as the challenges in achieving the goals of policy on the ground. The Reader - aimed at professors, students, and researchers - provides an overview of the literature on housing policy and planning that is both comprehensive and interdisciplinary. It is particularly suited for graduate and undergraduate courses on housing policy offered to students of public policy and city planning. The Reader is structured around the key debates in affordable housing, ranging from the conflicting motivations for housing policy, through analysis of the causes of and solutions to housing problems, to concerns about gentrification and housing and race. Each debate is contextualized in an introductory essay by the editors, and illustrated with a range of texts and articles. Elizabeth Mueller and Rosie Tighe have brought together for the first time into a single volume the best and most influential writings on housing and its importance for planners and policy-makers.

This sweeping work traces the idea of race for more than three centuries to show that 'race' is not a product of science but a cultural invention that has been used variously and opportunistically since the eighteenth century. Updated throughout, the fourth edition of this renowned text includes a compelling new chapter on the health impacts of the racial worldview, as well as a thoroughly rewritten chapter that explores the election of Barack Obama and its implications for the meaning of race in America and the future of our racial ideology.
