Overview of the Practice Coordinator Role at UCSF

The practice coordinator position at UCSF plays an essential role in ensuring smooth clinical and administrative operations within various medical departments. This job involves managing patient scheduling, coordinating between healthcare providers and patients, handling insurance documentation, and streamlining office workflows. UCSF practice coordinators are responsible for maintaining efficient communication channels and supporting clinical staff to enhance patient care quality. The role requires excellent organizational abilities, attention to detail, and strong interpersonal skills to interact effectively with staff, patients, and external vendors. The scope of duties may vary depending on the specific department but generally centers on optimizing clinical practice management.

Key Responsibilities

Practice coordinators at UCSF typically manage a wide range of tasks that include but are not limited to:

- Scheduling patient appointments and managing calendar systems
- Coordinating communication between physicians, nurses, and administrative staff
- Assisting with billing and insurance claims processing
- Maintaining accurate medical records and documentation
- Organizing staff meetings and training sessions
- Ensuring compliance with healthcare regulations and institutional policies

Factors Influencing Practice Coordinator UCSF Salary

Several factors influence the salary of a practice coordinator at UCSF, ranging from individual qualifications to departmental budgets. Understanding these elements helps clarify why salaries may differ among employees holding the same job title.

Education and Certifications

Higher educational attainment and professional certifications can positively impact the salary of a practice coordinator. Candidates with degrees in healthcare administration, business, or related fields are often compensated at higher rates. Additionally, certifications such as Certified Medical Manager (CMM) or Professional Medical Management (PMM) can enhance earning potential.

Experience and Tenure

Years of experience in healthcare administration or clinical practice coordination are significant factors. UCSF typically rewards seasoned coordinators with higher pay due to their proven expertise and familiarity with institutional processes. New hires may start at entry-level salaries, with incremental increases based on performance and longevity.

Department and Location

The department within UCSF where a practice coordinator works can also affect salary. Specialized units such as oncology or cardiology may offer higher wages due to the complexity of coordination required. Additionally, UCSF's location in San Francisco, a high cost-of-living area, influences salary scales to remain competitive in the local job market.

Union Membership and Collective Bargaining

Some practice coordinators at UCSF may be part of labor unions or collective bargaining groups, which can impact wage negotiations and benefits. Unionized employees might enjoy standardized pay scales and periodic salary adjustments based on negotiated agreements.

Typical Salary Range and Comparison

The salary for a practice coordinator at UCSF typically falls within a competitive range when compared to similar roles in other academic medical centers and healthcare organizations. UCSF's commitment to attracting and retaining skilled professionals is reflected in its compensation packages.

Estimated Salary Range

Based on current data and industry standards, the annual salary for a practice coordinator at UCSF generally ranges from approximately $60,000 to $85,000. Entry-level coordinators may earn closer to the lower end of this spectrum, while experienced coordinators with specialized skills or leadership responsibilities can earn salaries at or above the midpoint.

Comparison with National Averages

When compared to national averages for practice coordinators in healthcare institutions, UCSF salaries are often slightly higher due to the institution's prominence and the San Francisco metropolitan area's living costs. Nationally, salaries can range from $50,000 to $80,000, making UCSF a competitive employer in this field.

Additional Compensation Components

Besides base salary, UCSF practice coordinators may benefit from bonuses, overtime pay, or shift differentials depending on their work schedules and departmental policies. These additional income sources can enhance total earnings significantly.

Educational and Experience Requirements

To qualify for a practice coordinator position at UCSF, candidates must meet specific educational and experiential criteria that ensure they can manage the complex responsibilities of the role.

Minimum Education

Most positions require at least a bachelor's degree in healthcare administration, business, public health, or a related discipline. Some roles may accept candidates with an associate degree combined with relevant experience, although this is less common in competitive UCSF departments.

Preferred Experience

Employers at UCSF generally prefer candidates with prior experience in medical office management, clinical coordination, or healthcare administration. Experience with electronic health records (EHR) systems, insurance billing, and regulatory compliance is highly valued.

Professional Development

Continuous professional development through workshops, certifications, and training is encouraged at UCSF. This ongoing education helps coordinators stay updated on healthcare regulations, technology advancements, and best practices in patient care management.

Benefits and Perks at UCSF

UCSF offers a comprehensive benefits package that supplements the practice coordinator ucsf salary, contributing to overall job satisfaction and employee well-being.

Health and Wellness Benefits

Employees typically receive medical, dental, and vision insurance coverage with options for dependents. Wellness programs, mental health resources, and employee assistance programs are also available to support staff health.

Retirement and Financial Benefits

UCSF provides retirement plans such as 401(k) or 403(b) with employer contributions. Other financial benefits include life insurance, disability coverage, and tuition reimbursement for continuing education.

Work-Life Balance and Additional Perks

Flexible work schedules, paid time off, parental leave, and commuter benefits are part of the UCSF employment package. These perks aim to promote a healthy work-life balance for practice coordinators and other staff members.

Career Advancement Opportunities

Practice coordinators at UCSF have multiple pathways for career growth, supported by the institution's structured development programs and internal job postings.

Leadership Roles

Experienced coordinators may advance into supervisory or managerial roles within clinical practice management. These leadership positions typically offer higher salaries and increased responsibilities.

Specialization and Cross-Training

UCSF encourages staff to develop specialized skills in areas such as patient safety, quality improvement, or healthcare informatics. Cross-training in different departments can also broaden career prospects.

Continuing Education and Certifications

Advancing education credentials and obtaining additional certifications can enhance a practice coordinator's qualifications, making them eligible for higher-level roles and salary increments.
