practice manager appreciation week 2023: Psychological Implications of Preterm Birth Livio Provenzi, Evalotte Mörelius, Mia McLean, Minesh Khashu, 2025-03-14 Preterm birth which comprises about 10% of births globally has significant short and long term implications for the child, its parents and the wider family. It poses a significant physical and mental health as well as economic burden on society. While the physical health complications of preterm birth are reasonably well documented in the literature, the data in terms of psychological impacts is still quite thin, especially for the long term. Indeed, preterm birth and the precocious hospitalization in the Neonatal Intensive Care Unit (NICU) might be highly distressful for both infants and parents. Different sources of stress (e.g., lights and sounds, parental separation, invasive and painful procedures) have been described and their impact on preterm infants' socio-emotional and socio-cognitive development as well as for parental well-being and adaptation deserve further investigations. The psychological implications of early interventions – during and after NICU stay – are also noteworthy and accumulation of data in this field is highly needed. The quality of parent-child interaction, from the immediate NICU admission to the first years of life is also a topic that merits investigation, as it is one of the most critical source of protection for the developmental trajectories of preterm infants.

practice manager appreciation week 2023: Practice Management , 1964 practice manager appreciation week 2023: Practice Management Compendium John Fry, K. Scott, P. Jeffree, 1991-07-31 General Practice is undergoing the most major series of changes since the introduction of the National Health Service in 1948. They concern both concepts of care and practical details of the way care is delivered. In spite of the hostility generated by the changes most of the broad general concepts have been accepted. The principle of patients having more choice is widely supported, the inclusion of preventive medicine and anticipatory care in the responsibilities of practice has few opponents, the introduction of audit as a way of improving performance has been generally welcomed. Even the idea of putting GPs in better financial management of patients and drug budgets has had supporters in principle. The antipathy has generally related to the method of introduction of these changes. One important concern has been the time requirements of the New Contract and the feeling that these will erode the real nature of our work: the close personal relationship with patients. If we improve the quality of our management this is less likely to happen. We shall be able to work within the New Contract and retain the quality of service we provide. If we improve the understanding of our staff of what we are trying to achieve we are more likely to reach the targets that we set whilst keeping people happy. vii This book sets out to explain the New Contract.
