Translation and Pronunciation of "Window" in French

The direct translation of "window" in French is fenêtre. This noun is feminine, so it is used with the articles la (the) and une (a/an). The pronunciation of fenêtre is approximately [fə.nɛtʁ], with the stress typically placed on the second syllable. It is important to note the accent circonflexe (^) over the letter "ê," which affects the pronunciation by indicating a slightly elongated vowel sound.

Usage in Sentences

In everyday French, fenêtre can be used in various contexts. For example:

- La fenêtre est ouverte. (The window is open.)
- Je regarde par la fenêtre. (I am looking through the window.)
- Il faut nettoyer les fenêtres. (The windows need to be cleaned.)

Gender and Plural Form

Since fenêtre is feminine, adjectives and articles must agree in gender and number. The plural form is fenêtres, pronounced [fə.nɛtʁ]. For example, les fenêtres means "the windows."

Types of Windows in French Architecture

Windows hold significant architectural value in French buildings, ranging from historic castles to modern homes. The vocabulary surrounding different types of windows is rich and reflects the diversity of designs.

Common Types of Windows

Several specific terms describe various window styles in French architecture:

- Fenêtre à guillotine: A sash window that slides vertically.
- Fenêtre battante: A casement window that opens outward or inward on hinges.
- Fenêtre coulissante: A sliding window moving horizontally.
- Lucarne: A dormer window often found on roofs.
- Baie vitrée: A large glass window or sliding glass door.

Historical Significance

Windows in historical French architecture, such as Gothic cathedrals and Renaissance châteaux, often feature stained glass or intricate stonework. These elements serve both aesthetic and functional purposes, allowing light while enhancing the building's grandeur.

Common Expressions and Idioms Involving "Window" in French

The word fenêtre is also present in various French idiomatic expressions and figurative language, highlighting its cultural relevance beyond the literal meaning.

Popular Idioms

Some frequent idiomatic expressions using fenêtre include:

- Donner une fenêtre: To provide an opportunity or time slot.

- Fenêtre d'ouverture: A window of opportunity.
- Jeter quelqu'un par la fenêtre: Literally "to throw someone out the window," meaning to dismiss or get rid of someone abruptly.
- Fenêtre sur cour: A window facing a courtyard, often implying a limited or enclosed view.

Figurative Uses

Beyond idioms, fenêtre is used metaphorically to describe perspectives or openings in abstract contexts, such as "a window into the past" or "a window of time."

The Digital Meaning of "Window" in French Language

In computing and technology, the term "window" also appears frequently. In French, the digital equivalent of a "window" is still fenêtre, referring to the graphical interface elements on a computer screen.

Computing Terminology

When discussing software, operating systems, or user interfaces, fenêtre denotes a distinct rectangular area on the screen that displays information or an application. For example:

- Ouvrir une fenêtre: To open a window.
- Fermer la fenêtre: To close the window.
- Fenêtre contextuelle: A pop-up window.

Adaptation in Technology

The usage of fenêtre in digital contexts shows how the French language adapts traditional vocabulary to new technological concepts, maintaining consistency and clarity in communication.

window in french language: A Window on Russia Edmund Wilson, 2019-11-05 A Window on Russia is a collection of Edmund Wilson's papers on Russian writers and the Russian language (which he taught himself to read), written between 1943 and 1971. Writers discussed include Pushkin, Gogol, Chekov, Turgenev, Tolstoy, among others. In A Window on Russia, which Wilson modestly calls 'a handful of disconnected pieces, written at various times when I happened to be interested in the various authors,' we encounter that rare pleasure of entering a living world where the dead hand of academia never casts its shadow. - Kirkus Reviews window in french language: Western Window in the Arab World Leon Borden Blair, 2014-01-30 Since November 8, 1942, when American troops in Operation Torch first landed on the beaches of North Africa, almost a million Americans—military personnel and their dependents—have lived in Morocco. Their impact on the political and social evolution of Morocco has been significant, but historians and political scientists before this book had made little effort to chart its course or to assess its outcome. The naval base at Port Lyautey in Morocco was the first foreign base captured by American troops in World War II, and United States objectives in Morocco continued to be primarily military. In 1942, as the price for French support against the Axis, the United States pledged its support for the restoration of the prewar French colonial empire. In 1950, faced with the threat of Soviet aggression, the United States negotiated an agreement with France and built four United States Air Force bases in Morocco without consultation with or notification of the Moroccan government. In spite of its sterile diplomatic policy and both Communist and Moroccan nationalist demands for evacuation of United States military bases, the United States retained essential military facilities in Morocco for many years. Leon Blair concludes that American military personnel and their dependents favorably conditioned Moroccan public opinion. By their egalitarianism, humanitarianism, and evident interest, they reinforced the idealistic image of the United States that was held by the majority of Moroccans. These Americans were neither individually nor collectively conscious agents in a campaign to modify Moroccan public opinion; they were simply a Western window in the Arab world, through which two civilizations might view one another. In the long run, they made a greater contribution in peace than in war.

window in french language: Francophone Literature as World Literature Christian Moraru, Nicole Simek, Bertrand Westphal, 2020-06-25 Francophone Literature as World Literature examines French-language works from a range of global traditions and shows how these literary practices draw individuals, communities, and their cultures and idioms into a planetary web of tension and cross-fertilization. The Francophone corpus under scrutiny here comes about in the evolving, markedly relational context provided by these processes and their developments during and after the French empire. The 15 chapters of this collection delve into key aspects, moments, and sites of the literature flourishing throughout the francosphere after World War II and especially since the 1980s, from the French Hexagon to the Caribbean and India, and from Québec to the Maghreb and Romania. Understood and practiced as World Literature, Francophone literature claims--with particular force in the wake of the littérature-monde debate--its place in a more democratic world republic of letters, where writers, critics, publishers, and audiences are no longer beholden to traditional centers of cultural authority.

a lifelong traveler, reader, and writer, invites you along on a lifetime of journeys, long and short, to “far away places with strange-sounding names”—or just down Highway 71 to picnic in the shade of Paul Bunyan and Babe. Window Seat: The Story of a Traveling Life presents an explorer’s tale or perhaps a memoir of journeying. Neset was born near the beginning of World War II and spent the next eighty-five years traversing the world, from northern Minnesota’s Koochiching County to Mongolia, Madagascar, Singapore, Syria, and most points between. While the lands are grand, the adventures reflect a more human scale, often originating in books Neset read and always planned by her alone. Who could have imagined that, as her travels drew to a close, the planet would be experiencing similar turmoil to the events leading up to the world war into which she was born? With that in mind, she encourages everyone to get out there and experience this magnificent planet while they still can.

window in french language: Following Norberg-Schulz Anna Ulrikke Andersen, 2021-12-16 This book examines the 'window' in the life and work of the seminal architectural thinker Christian Norberg-Schulz (1926 - 2000). It draws new attention to his architectural designs and re-examines his acclaimed theoretical work on the phenomenology of architecture and place within the context of a biography of his life, linking him with other historical figures such as Helen Keller and Rainer Maria Rilke, and framing him within the modernist tradition of the latter. Taking a novel, experimental approach, the book also explores the potential of the essay-film as an innovative new approach to producing architectural history. Bridging archival research and artistic exploration, its ten chapters, written by an architectural historian who is also a film-maker, are each accompanied by a short documentary film, hosted online and linked from within the chapter, which use the medium of film to creatively explore and delve deeper into little-known aspects of Norberg-Schulz's theory of genius loci and the phenomenology of architecture. The book questions what it means to 'follow' those who came before, exploring the positionality of the architectural historian/filmmaker. Offering an insightful account of the life, work, and theory of a key thinker, Following Norberg-Schulz is also essential reading for those interested in practice-led research methodologies, particularly in the practice of film-making and the essay film, providing a highly innovative example of scholarly research which bridges the text-film gap.
